World Trade Center Opens Door for Community

The door to international trading has now been opened to small businesses in Cleveland County and surrounding areas.

On Wednesday, Oct. 2 Gardner-Webb College will launch the World Trade Center, an outreach program of the Research Triangle World Trade Center. The Center, the second in North Carolina, will serve as an outlet for businesses interested in import and export trading. It has been described as a "one-stop shopping center" for businesses that want to become involved in foreign trade.

A non-profit organization, the World Trade Center provides services and programs to develop the international opportunities of the region's firms, as well as the international awareness of policy makers, business and educational leaders and the general public.

The Center is a link with about 200 other trade centers worldwide and serves as a showcase for regional products. The aim is to make international business as feasible and profitable as local business, particularly for small or medium-sized businesses.

Through the state-of-the-art International Resource Center, the need for easy, rapid access to international information will be met with an extensive multi-media (e.g. hard copy, computer-based, microform, video) resource base on international trade, finance, economics and culture.

At Gardner-Webb, Dr. Anthony Negbenebor, assistant professor of economics in the Broyhill School of Management, will serve as director of the Center and will provide assistance in its operation.

Currently there are 217 World Trade Centers in 207 cities and 67 countries. NETWORK, an on-line information system designed to improve trade and relationships among World Trade Centers, was introduced in 1985. It operates in 127 cities and 45 countries, offering World Trade Centers and their members current trade leads, electronic mail and a database of company profiles.

The Center is designed to provide trade research information on trade opportunities, world markets, government regulations, tariffs and other business topics. In addition, education services are offered through seminars, language instruction and training programs on international business activities.

Other offerings of the Center include:

- * Access to the WTC Network, an international electronic buyer-seller bulletin board and communications system

- * Advice of a staff of experts who provide information and referrals on foreign businesses

- * Meeting sites, temporary office space, translation services, temporary staff assistance from the U.S. Department of Commerce and the State Department of Economic and Community Development, international communications sites and protocol assistance for international visitors.

- * A business and economics library, including international publications and a wide array of international computer information.

- * A planned World Trade Center Club that will allow members to entertain guests.

Former North Carolina Governor James B. Hunt is the founding chairman of the organization. The idea was spurred by studies that found the potential for doubling the participation of small and medium businesses in international trade and investment.

Dollars for the project are directed from the Cleveland County Economic Development Commission and Gardner-Webb College. Once the Center is in operation, the Cleveland County Economic Development Commission will continue to underwrite the Center's annual membership fee. In addition, the Center will recover service costs through moderate user fees.

The World Trade Center is a member of the World Trade Center Association, a non-profit, non-political organization founded in 1968 to encourage the expansion of world trade.

Business hours for the Center will be 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. The schedule of user rates, which will be available at the College, will reflect cost recovery for the actual operation of the Center. The service will provide area businesses, small and large, the opportunity to be on the cutting edge of access to trade with international partners. ■

Southern Bell Assists Program for the Blind

Gardner-Webb College's Program for the Blind is the recipient of a $3000 contribution by Southern Bell.

The contribution has made possible the purchase of two new pieces of technology to assist visually impaired students — a Braille 'n Speak and a Miniature Electronic Visual Aid.

The Braille 'n Speak is a portable talking computer operated by commands entered in Braille on a seven-key Braille keyboard. The device, which costs approximately $900, can be used as a talking computer terminal, a Braille-to-print transcriber, a word processor or a talking calculator.

Blind students will carry the Braille 'n Speak to their classroom lectures and then transcribe notes for future study. The device will eliminate the time consuming process of audio recording of lectures, making note-taking much easier for the students.

The Miniature Electronic Visual Aid (MEVA) provides a portable magnification system for visually impaired students who have some vision.

The hand-held camera transmits a magnified image to a four-inch flat screen CRT monitor. The MEVA, with a price tag of about $2100, will allow students to read their own study materials rather than relying on the services of a personal reader. This gives the students more independence.

The MEVA also bridges the gap for students who can no longer rely upon enlarged print and cannot benefit from Braille.

Gardner-Webb has been the recipient of the generosity of Southern Bell on a number of occasions. The company contributed to the construction of the Lutz-Yelton Convocation Center in the 1980s and has made gifts to the Annual College Fund, which provides unrestricted operating funds. ■

Dr. Robbins Leads Staley Lecture Series

Dr. Duffy Robbins, chairman of the Department of Youth Ministry at Eastern College in St. Davids, Penn., spoke to students and faculty as this year's Staley Distinguished Christian Scholar.

The series, held earlier this month, dealt with the topic of heritage — a heritage of victory as depicted by Joshua at Jerico; a heritage of commitment, illustrated by this country's allegiance; and the heritage of endurance — going the distance.

Dr. Robbins is an 18-year veteran of youth ministry, having spoken across the country at youth retreats and conventions, conferences and workshops and at several major Christian music festivals.

A graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill with a degree in psychology, Robbins graduated magna cum laude with a Masters of Divinity from Gordon-Conwell Theological Seminary in South Hamilton, Mass.

Ordained in the United Methodist Church, Robbins has written curriculum and serves as consultant to the United Methodist Publishing House on issues pertaining to youth and youth ministry. He also serves on the editorial advisory board for Youth!.

Dr. Robbins came to Gardner-Webb as a Staley Distinguished Christian Scholar with the support of the Thomas F. Staley Foundation.

Named for its founder, the Thomas F. Staley Foundation was formed in the 1950s as a charitable organization. In the late 1960s the Staley Distinguished Christian Scholar Lecture Program became a permanent feature of the foundation.

Through the Staley Distinguished Christian Scholar Program small colleges throughout the country are afforded an opportunity to hear the Christian Faith proclaimed and defended by able evangelical scholars. ■

Japanese Students Begin School Year After Several Adventures

As 12 of Gardner-Webb College's students begin the 1991-92 school year they have mixed feelings.

The students, far removed from their home of Sapporo, Japan — a city of 1.6 million — have adjusted quite well to the friendly rural area of Boiling Springs and the campus of Gardner-Webb College, where they will be educated for the next two years.

The students are the first participants in the USA Transfer Program, a cooperative program between Dohto University in Mombetsu, Japan, and five American institutions of higher learning. The program allows Japanese students to do two years of upperclass study at an American college or university.

The students arrived on campus May 22. Since that time they have spent an active summer becoming acquainted with the American culture and with North Carolina and its region as well as the people of this area.

Under the direction of Jean Cabiness, director of international students at Gardner-Webb, the students have also been enrolled in an intensive English class to prepare them for fall. In the four-hour class, which meets Monday through Friday, the students study conversation, grammar and writing. And, though each of the students has his or her own preference, most of the students still feel more comfortable with writing than conversation.

Nobuko Miyako relates that, while her chosen major will be either health education or English, one of her goals is to speak English fluently. Mastering the language is something, she says, that is quite important to a career in Japan.

The students have studied American Culture under John Brock, visiting professor of theatre arts at the College. In addition, they have traveled to the Biltmore House in Asheville, to Myrtle Beach, S.C. and have enjoyed the offerings of the Great Smokey Mountains, Williamsburg, Va., Washington, D.C., and Pennsylvania.

In addition to their travels, the students have enjoyed Southern hospitality on weekends. They have been guests for cookouts, picnics, swimming parties and other social events as well as a reception at the home of College President and Mrs. Chris White.

Miss Miyako says that she particularly enjoyed doing "the wave" at an Atlanta Braves game this summer. Yoshihiko Shinano and Sosuke Kyono agree with smiles and nods, although shopping holds a close second in popularity.

The teens say that they enjoy shopping for clothes in America and admit that this country's styles are much more casual than in Japan. There, they say, students are expected to dress more formally for classes — not the relaxed look of jeans and t-shirts or shorts.

The students are finding that they are homesick for one thing — Japanese food. Although they have enjoyed being introduced to such foods as brownies and the smorgasbord offered at the many covered dish dinners they have attended.

Their experiences have all been pleasant and each describes this area as beautiful, commenting on the open spaces and grass. They have looked forward to the opening of school, making new friends and getting to know new American roommates. Yet, each has kicked off the semester with nervous enthusiasm.

The International Transfer Program is designed to allow students to complete their first two years of study at Dohto before transferring as juniors to one of the five selected American institutions.

In addition to Gardner-Webb College, which is the newest member of this cooperative program, the USA Transfer Program is offered at Hawaii Pacific College in Hawaii, The University of La Verne in La Verne, Calif., Baker University in Baldwin, Kansas, and Franklin University in Columbus, Ohio.

The students were allowed to select the geographic region in which they would like to study, with Gardner-Webb being the only selection in the South.

The location of Gardner-Webb was instrumental in its being selected by the administrators of Dohto to be a part of the program. "They were looking for a small, residential, community-oriented college, away from major cities," said Gardner-Webb College President Dr. Christopher White.

"The parents of the students were very concerned with a safe environment," said Dr. Frank Bonner, vice president of academic and student affairs at Gardner-Webb. "They wanted a rural, wholesome environment, an institution they saw as small and caring, one that would be concerned with the student as an individual," he explained.

Noting the quality of education provided in Japanese universities, Dr. White said, "They looked at schools that would further challenge their students, and Gardner-Webb met that criteria." ■

Campus Safety Measures Focus of Department

Chris Wilmer intends to see that Gardner-Webb College will be a safer campus this fall.

Miss Wilmer, who has assumed the newly-created position of Crime Prevention Officer in the College's Department of Safety and Security, has some exciting ideas.

As part of the program, Miss Wilmer has already designed a "Gotcha" campaign. "The idea," Miss Wilmer says, "is designed to combat crime by letting students know of potential problem areas or situations on campus." This would include such situations as doors being left unlocked, valuables left unattended and poorly lighted sidewalks.

A Bulldog Watch Committee, made up of student and faculty representatives, has been formed to help locate these problems. During the first two weeks of classes Miss Wilmer and the committee members will travel about campus, keeping watch for such situations. When a problem area is discovered, a "GOTCHA" sticker will be left on site as a reminder to students to be aware of the potential danger that has been created by the situation.

David Helton, director of safety and security at Gardner-Webb, says that the idea behind the Crime Prevention move is a proactive measure. "So often our office is forced to react," says Helton, "This will enable us to provide better service to the college community."

Helton also notes that Miss Wilmer, who has been working full-time at getting the position ready for launch, is an enthusiastic addition to the staff.

Another offering of the office is the newly designed "Operation Care," which will extend into the surrounding community. Through "Operation Care" the College's identification equipment will be taken into elementary schools and daycares in the area and ID's will be made of the children.

Those who are interested in participating will be provided with two photo ID's — one to be kept with the child at all times and one to be kept on file at home. This will assist in identifying a child in the event of an emergency. The ID includes information such as name, address, blood type, allergies, emergency contact and a thumbprint. A $5 charge will cover the cost of film and equipment.

In addition to its other offerings the department will be introducing a special program this fall. "Prison, Drugs and You," aimed at student attention, brings inmates from minimum custody prison units onto campus to speak.

This program, which is presented in conjunction with the Department of Crime Control and Public Safety's "Think Smart" program, screens and carefully selects the inmates who participate. The inmates are then trained to work in partnership with local Crime Prevention Officers to send out the message of crime prevention in the community.

The inmates deliver a 15- to 20-minute talk — each relating his or her own story. A high-impact part of the delivery is in the inmate's sharing what it means to have one's freedom taken away. The inmates also talk about the future and share how they plan to make the best of their lives when released. The close of the program brings advice to the students on how to stay out of trouble.

The idea behind the "Prison, Drugs and You" segment is to deter criminal conduct. It points out the serious consequences that result from violating the law.

Students are urged, as in any community, to be aware of safety at all times. Several programs offered through the Crime Prevention Office help to make this possible. Two such programs include a "Watchdog" escort service and "Operation Engrave." The escort service, in place on campus for a year, provides students with escort assistance around the clock. "Operation Engrave" makes it possible for students to engrave their belongings for proper identification.

"The safety and security of our students is always our top concern," says Jerome Scott, associate vice president and dean of student development.

Scott says that it is important for both students and their parents to feel assured of a safe, secure environment and notes that the campaign is a preventative measure. "Nationally, colleges and universities will be paying more attention to prevention programs," Scott says, adding, "We, at Gardner-Webb, want to be forerunners and not followers. I think this program will do just that for us." ■

Several Named to Student Alumni Council

Several students have been selected as members of the Student Alumni Council of Gardner-Webb.

The council is a highly selective group which serves as an extension of the Gardner-Webb College Alumni Association. The student group sponsors campus programs and activities which enhance the education of the student body. The group also coordinates events with the College's development office.

Included in this year's council membership are: Marty Elmore, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Elmore of

Marty White To Serve Congressional Internship

One Gardner-Webb student will have Washington, D.C. as a classroom and members of Congress as professors this fall.

Marty White, a junior political science major, will spend the next three months in a congressional internship, serving under North Carolina Congressman Cass Ballenger.

The selection of an intern, which must be approved by the congressman, is made on the basis of grade point average, extra-curricular activities, past summers activities and a personal interview.

"However you look at it, it has to be an honor," says Dr. Barry Hambright, professor of political science and history and White's campus advisor.

White, who is the son of Dr. and Mrs. M. Christopher White of Shelby, has served as sports editor of the student newspaper The Pilot, was president of his residence hall last year and served as sophomore senator. His summers have been busy as well. White enrolled in the Naval Reserves boot camp in summer 1990 and in the Navy Technical School in Meridian, Miss., early this summer. In addition, he has spent several weeks of this year's summer break working with the Shelby law firm of Hamrick, Mauney, Flowers and Martin.

The internship experience is not new to Gardner-Webb. Two other students served internships under Broyhill in 1985 and 1986 and the first intern from the College participated in the program in the mid '70s.

While in Washington, White will primarily busy himself with such tasks as sorting mail and directing pieces on certain issues to particular individuals and running errands to the floor through the underground system to the Capitol. He also hopes to have the opportunity to sit in on some sessions.

White, who plans to enter the field of law, says, "I hope to see up close how Congress and the government in Washington works. It is one thing to hear about it in class, but quite another to experience it yourself."

Dr. Hambright says, "It is the kind of experience you can't quantify — what it does for you in terms of knowledge. You really can't put a premium on this."

Dr. Hambright also discusses the value of such a wide experience for students who are planning to enter law school. "Gardner-Webb has been trying to provide more opportunities for students — to do the kinds of things that universities are able to do." ■

Gardner-Webb Alumnus Remembers Reverend T. Max Linnens (1919-1991)

I knew right away that Reverend T. Max Linnens was my kind of man. As a college freshman in 1958, and on my first Sunday away from home, I had wandered into Boiling Springs Baptist Church in desperate need of spiritual nourishment. I discovered that the church was inaugurating a new pastor, but as a college student and as a member of the United Methodist Church, I did not consider a change of ministers particularly noteworthy. I had no way of knowing at the time, but I would later understand, how much a pastor can accomplish in twenty-seven years at the same church. Before Reverend Linnens retired from that pulpit, I would earn four college degrees, serve a tour of duty in the navy, and serve sixteen years on the faculty at Gardner-Webb.

At any rate, I was not interested on that first Sunday in doing any serious reflection on the historical significance of what I was witnessing. A week of football practice under the searing Cleveland County sun had left me shaken and wondering whether I had made a mistake in deciding to enroll in an insignificant little Baptist junior college in a strange crossroads town. Nevertheless, I liked the church and found my courage and my spirits rejuvenated. I found strength that day in Boiling Springs Baptist Church, and I continued to find it for many years. I especially appreciated the decisive influence that Pastor Linnens exerted during my first two years of college — the most difficult years, as well as the most crucial years that I have ever lived through. There were times when I entered the sanctuary barely hanging on and needing to hear the words of life. I was never disappointed.

The formative years in Max Linnens' own intellectual life were the years that he spent at Gardner-Webb College. Enrolled here from 1950-1952, he was, in fact, one of the most gifted students to ever attend the institution. His academic success in itself was most surprising because Max Linnens was a high school dropout. Yet he began to feel a deep yearning in the depths of his soul to preach the Gospel. The absence of a high school diploma was troubling. Nevertheless, he earned a GED, quit his job driving a truck, and, on the advice of Dr. L.H. Hollingsworth, enrolled at Gardner-Webb College. After graduating from Gardner-Webb with highest honors, he continued his study at Wake Forest where he earned the coveted Phi Beta Kappa pin. It was one of his proudest possessions. Southeastern Seminary followed; however, pastorates in Chapel Hill and St. Pauls did not diminish his consuming desire to return to his roots — to the Boiling Springs congregation and Gardner-Webb College. Dr. Buddy Corbin perhaps said it best: "Max Linnens loved Gardner-Webb College more than any person that I have ever met." That kind of love effected changes in several generations of college students.

Max Linnens responded to a strange compulsion one day in the spring of 1961: he wrote a poem to honor his mentor, Dr. Phillip Elliott, Gardner-Webb's president. There was no particular reason to do the tribute at that time, because Dr. Elliott's planned retirement was scarcely more than a month away. But Max Linnens composed a poem and read it to the church congregation on the Sunday of April 9. The following Sunday, Max Linnens preached Dr. Elliott's funeral from the same pulpit. The most poignant phrase in Linnens' poem captured the essence of Gardner-Webb College during those years: "The man who wouldn't quit came to the college that refused to die."

Those who preferred to place God and his ministers in a comfortable box were inevitably frustrated by Reverend Linnens. He was an individualist almost to a fault, and when he felt deeply about matters, he refused to accommodate himself to other peoples' demands and expectations. His life would have been easier at times had he done so, but he had the temperament and the convictions of a man of powerful spiritual awareness. As with many poets, he was frequently misunderstood by those whose horizons he sought to extend. Make no mistake about it, this pastor had little patience with "plastic people" and "those whose halos were too much in evidence."

See Linnens, page 16.

Dr. Whitaker Remembered for Contributions to Science, Education

The late Dr. Martin Dewey Whitaker, an alumnus of Boiling Springs High School, is remembered as one of the country's foremost authorities on nuclear physics.

The Ellenboro native, who advanced to earn a degree from Wake Forest, a master's degree in physics from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and his Ph.D. from New York University, was closely associated with the Atomic Energy Program from its inception — the program that eventually produced the A-bomb.

Dr. Whitaker was acting chairman of the department of physics at New York University when, in January 1942, two months after Pearl Harbor, he was inducted to join the Metallurgical Laboratory at the University of Chicago.

There, he was to work on the program that lead to the development of the first atomic bomb. After a year of research on the fundamental principles of the release of atomic energy, Dr. Whitaker was appointed director of the Clinton Laboratories in Oak Ridge, Tenn., to direct the design, construction and operation of the project.

At that time, the plant did not exist, but had been projected as the principal facility for the plant operation of the plutonium production process.

In his position at the lab, he guided the development of plutonium through its early stages and on to its successful climax at Hiroshima. He continued to direct the laboratories throughout the 1943 to 1945 period and left Clinton Laboratories well on the way toward the development of the first peacetime atomic energy power plant, which the Army had announced would be constructed.

On June 1, 1946, Dr. Whitaker accepted the presidency of Lehigh University in Bethlehem, Pa. This would begin a second leg of his prestigious career.

During his tenure at Lehigh, Dr. Whitaker directed a development program that brought scores of new buildings and recreational facilities into being and raised the intellectual level to new heights.

During his term, from 1946 until his death in 1960, Dr. Whitaker saw three new dormitories and five fraternity residence halls erected, a University Center and gymnasium remodeled, the completion of an engineering laboratory and the renovation of several buildings and a church.

Programmatically, the school established a department of religion; offered master's degrees in 20 departments and doctorates in 12; initiated an adult education program; and renovated its observatory to name a few changes.

The recipient of several honorary degrees, including the Doctor of Law from Lafayette College in 1946, the Doctor of Science from Wake Forest and Moravian College in 1947 and the Doctor of Laws from Rutgers University in 1948, he was active in national educational organizations and in state and community endeavors.

Dr. Whitaker served in various capacities in the Pennsylvania Association of Colleges and Universities, American Society of Engineering Education, National Commission of Accrediting and the Governor's State Planning Board for the State of Pennsylvania. He was a Fellow in the American Physical Society, a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, American Society for Engineering Education and Newcomen Society, Sigma Xi and other groups.

He was also a trustee of the American University at Beirut, a trustee of St. Luke's Hospital in Bethlehem, Pa. and a director of the United Gas Improvement Co.

Carolyn Duncan Brings French From Paris to the Classroom

Carolyn Duncan is doing her part to promote the use of foreign language in North Carolina and especially at Crest High School.

Mrs. Duncan, a 1972 graduate of Gardner-Webb College, was the recipient this year of a scholarship to participate in a four-week Summer Institute in French that was held in Paris.

The concept of the Institute began three years ago as a way to improve the use of foreign language in North Carolina. The first leg of the project was introduced in Greensboro.

Mrs. Duncan recalls that her group stayed together and became "totally emerged" — speaking only the language for which they were attending.

Concentration was given to French, Spanish and Latin, with classes offered in methodology and advanced grammar composition. Four native speakers led the conversation classes.

It was, in part, her participation in that first institute that made Carolyn Duncan eligible for this summer's institute experience. "There were about 60 persons eligible from across the state," she says.

Mrs. Duncan's acceptance to the Institute in France was based on an essay, written in French, that explained why she wished to participate. Additional requirements included recommendation by the principal of her school, approval from the school system and a contractual agreement to speak only French during the session.

Mrs. Duncan, who holds a master's from Appalachian State University, teaches French at Crest High School. She says her family was very supportive of her efforts to expand her French.

Study through the Institute was done at the University of Paris. The participants, representing a number of nationalities, came together to live in an international residence. They dined together in the same cafeteria, learned to exist without television or telephones and spoke only the language of the Institute — French.

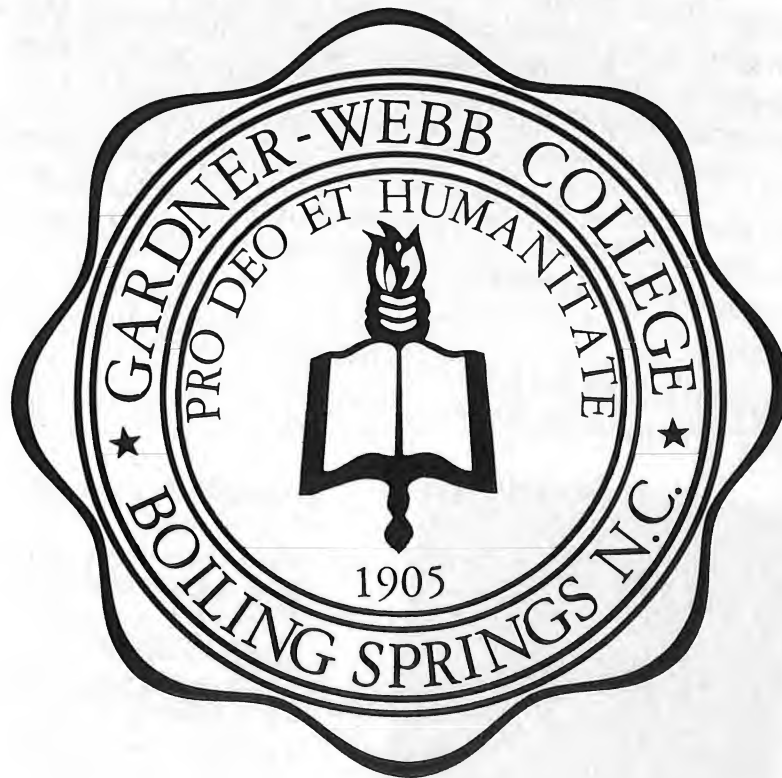

Morning classes were more intensive sessions dealing with methods and phonetics. The afternoons, however, were filled with culturization and civilization. The group toured many of the area's museums and visited several of the nation's monuments and sights — all with a native tour guide.

Mrs. Duncan says the experience helped update her French vocabulary. Something, she says, that will definitely benefit her offerings to her upper level French students. These students, she explains, are already focusing on conversational levels and reading.

After experiencing total emersion in French, Mrs. Duncan says it was difficult to return to speaking English. "It is reverse culture shock," she says of returning home. "I have to think what I'm going to say in English." ■

Chadwells Support Christian Service Organization Scholarship Effort

The Cleo and James Chadwell Endowed Scholarship was established at Gardner-Webb College by the Hickory couple in 1990.

Former residents of Shelby, the Chadwells moved to Independence Manor Retirement Home in Hickory early last year. Long-time members of Shelby's First Baptist Church, the Chadwells have joined and are actively involved in Viewmont Baptist Church in Hickory.

*Chadwell is a retired executive with J.C.
Penney Co., with his last assignment in Shelby.*

The endowment is designed to become part of the Christian Service Organization endowment. "They have a long and deep love for Gardner-Webb College, particularly the Christian Service Organization," said College President M. Christopher White.

"They are committed Christians themselves and believe in the need for an educated ministry," he said of the Chadwells.

The Chadwells voice their belief in the Christian Service Organization — on what it has to offer and what it can do to help equip young men and women to fulfill God's call.

Chadwell has served as a member of the board of directors of the Christian Service Organization and both he and Mrs. Chadwell are responsible for enlisting the interest of numerous others in the organization.

Jarvis Estate Acknowledges Gardner-Webb College With $1/4 Million

Herman Jarvis, a self-made businessman from Asheville, did not have a formal education. Yet, he believed in youth and felt strongly about the need for educational opportunities.

Although an active member of First Baptist Church in Asheville, and a staunch supporter of Baptist causes in North Carolina, Jarvis did not know about Gardner-Webb College.

Once introduced to the school and the educational offerings it provided in a Christian setting, Jarvis became a believer — and a supporter.

When 81-year-old Jarvis passed away in April, 1990 his estate reflected a sizable gift to Gardner-Webb College — $1/4 million dollars.

The Honorable Judge James M. Baley Jr. of Asheville, a friend and advisor for Jarvis, recalls telling Herman Jarvis about Gardner-Webb College, "a fine Baptist school in the western part of North Carolina."

From that moment, 20 years ago, Jarvis decided that Gardner-Webb satisfied his requirements and included the College in his bequests.

Today, Baley relates, "He (Jarvis) wanted his money to go for helping those who were needy and who probably wouldn't go (to school) without the funds."

Jarvis requested that the Herman and Pearl Jarvis Scholarship Fund be used as an endowment to provide academic scholarships.

Jarvis was a native of Buncombe County. A member of the Asheville Fire Department for several years, he later worked with American LaFrance Fire Equipment Co. as a salesman. He traveled in North and South Carolina and Tennessee with LaFrance until his retirement.

During World War II, Jarvis also served with the United States Coast Guard in Norfolk, Va. He was a life member of the Elks Lodge No. 1401; a 32nd Degree Mason with Mount Hermon Lodge No. 118 of Asheville; and a Shriner.

Family was important to Jarvis, although he and his wife had no children. As his parents aged and needed care, Jarvis built the Pine Forest Nursing Home in the south Biltmore section of Asheville.

Reflected in his bequests are gifts to several family members and friends, as well as to the Oxford Orphanage, First Baptist Church of Asheville and the Eliada Home for Children.

Price Scholarship Reflects Interests

Bonnie Roberts Price of Boiling Springs has established the R.E. and Bonnie R. Price Endowed Scholarship.

Mrs. Price received both an associate's degree and a bachelor's degree from Gardner-Webb College. She continued her education at Southern Seminary and holds degrees in religious education and church music. Mrs. Price has been an active part of the Christian Service Organization since 1972. She recalls that the organization claimed her interest as soon as she heard about its efforts.

A member of Poplar Springs Baptist Church, Mrs. Price says she has had "a church interest for a good many years." Her husband, the late R.E. Price, was a member of the Gardner-Webb College Board of Trustees, serving as chairman in 1959.

Discussing her endowment of a Christian Service Organization scholarship, Mrs. Price says, "I hope it will get big enough to do a lot of good."

Moores Endow Scholarship For Worthy, Needy Students

When Dan and Bettye Moore of Boiling Springs made the decision to endow a scholarship at Gardner-Webb, much thought had gone into the decision.

Moore recalled that had it not been for Gardner-Webb College, it was unlikely that he would have been able to attend college at all during the Depression.

The two also agreed that "it is imperative that every kid have the opportunity to go to college," according to Moore.

The Moores relate that, with no children of their own, they felt an obligation to help with the education of other young people.

The Daniel W. and Bettye A. Moore Jr. Scholarship was endowed in 1990 "to provide financial assistance to worthy and/or needy full-time students." We thought the College had better judgement as to how to use the scholarship. A restricted scholarship might have missed the very students we are trying to help, Moore says.

Pleasant Grove Baptist Long-Time Friend of Christian Service Organization

Pleasant Grove Baptist Church, located on Highway 18 North in Shelby, has served as an active supporter of the Christian Service Organization since the early 1970s.

The church, pastored by the Rev. Allan Barlow, became familiar with the Christian Service Organization through its interim pastor, Dr. Thurman Lewis. It is recognized as one of the original supporters of the organization.

This year, Pleasant Grove Baptist endowed a scholarship for the Christian Service Organization to further that support. The scholarship is part of the general scholarship pool of the organization.

Endowed Scholarships

Endowed scholarships have been a major source of financial aid for literally thousands of students throughout Gardner-Webb's 86-year history.

Endowed scholarships are established by donors who wish for only the annual earnings from their invested contributions to be awarded as scholarship aid. This provides a permanent fund from which future students will benefit indefinitely.

While scholarships are "fully endowed" when a fund reaches or exceeds $10,000, many donors choose to initiate scholarship funds with lesser amounts, making additions to the funds until they become fully endowed.

We are grateful to the donors for their generosity in endowing the following scholarship funds:

The Christian Service Organization

The Christian Service Organization is a special endowed scholarship fund which provides financial support to students who are preparing for vocational Christian service. Organized in 1971, the endowment has grown to $655,595.

Within this larger fund are individual endowed scholarship funds, established by interested donors. Christian Service Organization scholarships are "fully endowed" when the total contributions to the fund reach or exceed $10,000. Many donors establish funds and make additions to the fund until it is fully endowed.

The Christian Service Organization is governed by its own Board of Directors which interviews each scholarship recipient and recommends awards. Donors who establish endowment funds within this organization express their commitment to assisting students in the high calling of the Christian ministry.

By Evans P. Whitaker

In the wake of the Tax Reform Act of 1986, many charitably-minded individuals — and their advisers — have been concerned about the alternative minimum tax, or “AMT”.

The reason is that the appreciation in donated assets must now be counted as a “tax preference”.

Too many tax preferences — whatever they might be in a particular situation — can cause the donor’s regular tax to fall below his or her AMT. When that happens, the AMT must be paid, because it is the higher tax.

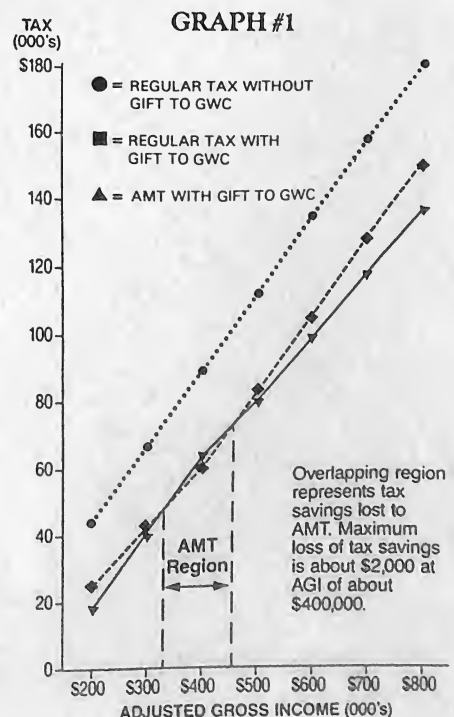

The purpose of the AMT is to assure that no taxpayer with substantial income avoids income tax through the unlimited use of exclusions, deductions, credits and special methods of accounting.

It turns out, however, that much of the concern about the AMT on the part of donors and their advisers is unnecessary. This can be shown with two graphs, which illustrate typical major gift situations.

Graph #1 is based on these assumptions:

- * The donor makes an outright gift of stock worth $100,000 to Gardner-Webb, which she bought several years ago for $40,000.
- * The donor has regular itemized deductions equal to 15 percent of her adjusted gross income.
- * The donor has tax preferences, apart from her gift, equal to five percent of her adjusted gross income.

As we see from Graph #1, the donor runs into the AMT only if her adjusted gross income falls within the range of about $300,000 to $450,000.

It is only in this range that the donor's regular tax with the gift falls below her AMT. But even if the donor runs into the AMT, the tax savings she loses as a result are quite minimal — only about $2000 at most. We can see that the regular tax the donor would pay without making her gift to Gardner-Webb is significantly higher at all income levels than the tax she pays (regular or AMT) with the gift.

$200,000	43,583	24,283	18,900	19,300	0
$300,000	66,100	40,783	25,325	25,325	0
$400,000	88,508	60,508	62,475	26,033	1,967
$500,000	110,908	82,908	80,850	28,000	0
$600,000	133,308	105,300	98,700	28,000	0
$700,000	155,708	127,708	116,550	28,000	0
$800,000	178,108	150,108	134,400	28,000	0

Graph #2 is based on the same assumptions as Graph #1, except that the gift to Gardner-Webb is assumed to consist of stock worth $100,000 that was purchased for $20,000 — a more highly appreciated asset.

We see from Graph #2 that by making a gift of a more highly appreciated asset, the donor runs into more of a problem with the AMT. But, even in the region around $400,000 of adjusted gross income, the tax savings lost to the AMT are only $6700 and the donor is still saving over $21,000 in taxes, compared to not making her gift to Gardner-Webb.

$200,000	43,583	24,283	23,100	19,300	0
$300,000	66,100	40,783	45,412	20,696	4,630
$400,000	88,508	60,508	67,200	21,308	6,692
$500,000	110,908	82,908	85,050	25,858	2,142
$600,000	133,308	105,300	102,900	28,000	0
$700,000	155,708	127,708	120,750	28,000	0
$800,000	178,108	150,108	138,600	28,000	0

Note: Numbers shown are for the year of the gift. For AGI below $333,334, a portion of the donor's charitable deduction is carried over to the following year. Charts #1 and #2 do not depict the donor's tax picture for the following year, which will depend on his or her deduction, preferences and income for that year.

If you have been considering a gift of an appreciated asset to Gardner-Webb but are concerned about the AMT, perhaps the AMT is not the problem it may appear to be.

Even if there is a significant AMT problem, the Office of Estate Planning may be able to help you and your advisers find a way around it through creative gift planning. Our goal is to help you accomplish your charitable goals, whatever they may be, even if Gardner-Webb is not your only interest. Our services are available without cost or obligation.

Please call or write if you would like more information.

The Web invites questions you may have on taxes, estate planning and giving strategies. Please address them to Evans P. Whitaker, Associate Vice President for College Relations.

Linnens Continued

Reverend Linnens was in his heyday in the late '50s and early '60s. He understood the mind set and the needs of the postwar generation, and as College Minister at Gardner-Webb during the period 1958-1968, he had the opportunity to help shape hundreds of lives. The big hit that he made with college students is evidenced by the dedication of the college yearbook in his honor in only his second year of service. Themes such as "yearning," "a sense mustness," and "stretching the soul" were woven into the fabric of his sermons and repeated with such consistency that they were driven into the very marrow of one's being. A man of his intellect and passion inevitably became discouraged at times, but he moved the congregation of Boiling Springs Baptist Church along the path of responsible ministry to human and social needs. His presence and his mark are permanently etched in the church's ministry.

Keen psychological insights and years of counseling troubled souls enabled Max Linnens to anticipate some of the most difficult problems of the day. For example, he began preaching earnestly about child abuse years before it became a national issue. He also spoke out boldly on race relations and women's rights in the church when those issues still aroused violent controversy in Baptist life. On many of these issues Baptists caught up with him, but on many others his visionary plans are still unfulfilled. He got neither the "Baptist Holy Angels' Nursery" nor the church-sponsored retirement home that he so deeply coveted.

His vision of the local church's role leaves us with much to contemplate, but we can thank God that he permitted this strong, sensitive pastor to be in our midst for so many years.

INAUGURAL CLASS INDUCTED INTO ATHLETIC HALL OF FAME

On Saturday, Sept. 14 the inaugural class was inducted into the Gardner-Webb Athletic Hall of Fame. This class was representative of the rich athletic tradition enjoyed by the College since the early 1930s.

The official induction was held at a formal morning ceremony, with the group presented at half-time of the football game against Livingston University.

Plaques honoring each inductee will be placed in the newly created Hall of Fame Trophy Case in the Lutz-Yelton Convocation Center.

The Gardner-Webb personalities who were inducted included Eddie Holbrook, former head basketball coach and athletic director; Norman Harris, former football, baseball and basketball coach; George Adams, All-American basketball player who also holds many school records; Chip Stuart, All-American quarterback who also holds many school, South Atlantic Conference and NAIA passing records; Zim Zimmerman, two-time All-American golfer and member of two national championship golf teams; Dina Smith McClure, all-time Gardner-Webb scoring leader in women's basketball; Gary Robinson, All-American baseball player; Zeno Wall, former three-sport star on Gardner-Webb's teams of the early 1930s; Dr. Eugene Poston, former president of Gardner-Webb College who oversaw the growth of the school from junior to senior status and the driving force behind much of Gardner-Webb's athletic success.

Holbrook

From 1964 until 1978 Gardner-Webb Athletics and the name Eddie Holbrook were synonymous. Even today, to some Gardner-Webb faithful, this is still the case. During his tenure at Gardner-Webb, Coach Holbrook served the College in many capacities — Head Basketball Coach, Athletic Director, Coordinator of Development and Athletics, Director of Summer Camps and Executive Director of the Bulldog Club.

Holbrook was best known as the man who built Gardner-Webb into a basketball power of national stature on both the junior and senior college levels. His record at Gardner-Webb was an amazing 328 wins and 67 losses with a 83.0 winning percentage. His senior college record was 205-39 for a 84.0 winning percentage; his junior college record 123-28 for a 81.5 winning percentage.

Holbrook's teams were known for an exciting brand of power basketball and for producing All-American players. Among the many outstanding players that played for Coach Holbrook were Artis Gilmore, George Adams, John Drew, Dave Bormann and Jim Blanks.

As Athletic Director, Holbrook led Gardner-Webb into the world of senior college competition. He was also the founder and director of the highly successful Bulldog Basketball Camp and many other sports camps. Holbrook was a founding member of the present-day Bulldog Club and served as its first Executive Director. He remains active in the Bulldog Club today.

After leaving Gardner-Webb, Holbrook moved to Furman University, where he was head basketball coach from 1978-82 and compiled a record of 65-44. His team finished runner-up in the Southern Conference one year and made one trip to the NCAA tournament. In 1984, Holbrook entered the sporting goods business and has proven that he still has the winning touch as his business has grown tremendously.

Harris

Norman Harris laid the foundation for much of Gardner-Webb's athletic success. He first came to Gardner-Webb in 1949 as an assistant football coach and head baseball coach, a position he held for 18 years. In 1952, he assumed the role of head football coach, where he remained for 19 years. Harris also served as head basketball coach for eight years during his tenure. In 1956 he founded the original version of the Bulldog Club.

While at Gardner-Webb, his teams won seven football conference championships, seven baseball conference championships and one basketball tournament championship. He also served as athletic director from 1952-69 and was president of the Western North Carolina Athletic Conference in 1967 and 1968. In 1968, he celebrated his 100th football win at Gardner-Webb.

An active member of the community while at the College, Harris started the summer recreation program for Boiling Springs in 1956 and coached the Shelby and Cherryville American Legion Teams for nine years. In 1953, his American Legion team finished fourth in the nation.

After leaving Gardner-Webb in 1970, Harris remained active in coaching and physical education until his retirement in 1989. He coached football and baseball at Titusville (Fla.) High School from 1970 until 1987, serving as assistant football coach for 16 years and head baseball coach for eight years. There, he also won two district championships in baseball and participated in six district and two state football championships.

Harris also coached Stan Musial Semi-Pro baseball in Titusville for two years finishing third in the state one year and second the next. He taught Physical Education, Health and Math at Titusville from 1970-89.

Adams

George Adams is arguably the greatest athlete ever to wear a Gardner-Webb uniform. Adams was a two-time first team NAIA All-American basketball player and is the College's all-time leading scorer and rebounder. Adams scored 2404 points in three years of senior college competition and pulled down 1113 rebounds in the same time period. His scoring average during this period was an amazing 31.2 points per game and his career rebound average was a whopping 14.4 per game. If his junior college statistics are included in his totals, Adams scored 2965 points for a 26.95 per game average and had over 1500 rebounds.

Adams still holds many Gardner-Webb records in other categories. He holds single game records for points scored (57 vs. Voorhees), Field Goals Made (24 vs. Voorhees) and most rebounds (26 vs. Warren Wilson). He holds single season records for scoring average (34.3, 1971-72), points scored (996, 1971-72), field goals made (412, 1971-72), best field goal percentage (64.2, 1971-72), most rebounds (407, 1971-72) and best rebound average (15.0, 1971-72). Adams still holds career records, other than total points and rebounds, for scoring average (31.2), field goals attempted (1638), field goals made (987), best field goal percentage (60.3) and rebounds average (14.4).

Stuart

Chip Stuart is the most recognizable player to ever play football at Gardner-Webb. He is the holder of many school, South Atlantic Conference, and NAIA passing records and was a first team All-American in 1982.

Stuart holds Gardner-Webb single game records for passing yards (401), passes attempted (64), passes completed (32 on two occasions), TD passes (6) and total offense (388 yards). He holds school single season records TD passes thrown (23 in 1982), most yards passing (2,389 in 1982), most passes completed (211 in 1982), best completion percentage (58.6 in 1982) and total offense (2,177 yards in 1982). This outstanding player also holds Gardner-Webb career records for TD passes thrown (58), passing yards (7,455), passes completed (648), passes attempted (1,170), completion percentage (55.0) and total offensive yards (6,984).

Stuart still holds South Atlantic Conference single game records for passing attempts (64), most passing yards (401) and most TD passes (5). He holds single season SAC records for passing attempts (360), completions (211), passing yards (2,389) and TD passes (23). He holds career SAC records for passing attempts (1,179), completions (648), passing yards (7,455), TD passes (58) and most consecutive passes without an interception (172), which is also a NAIA national record.

After leaving Gardner-Webb, Stuart played professionally in Canada and entered the high school coaching ranks. He is presently the Head Football Coach and Athletic Director at Irwin County High School in Ocilla, Ga.

Zimmerman

Zim Zimmerman was a standout golfer for Gardner-Webb from 1973-77. Zimmerman was named All-American in 1975 and 1976 as well as All-District 26 in 1975. He played on the 1975 team that finished third in the nation as well as the 1976 and 1977 teams that won Gardner-Webb's only two national titles. He was a captain on both national title teams.

Zimmerman has remained active in golf since his days at Gardner-Webb. He is presently the golf professional at Cedarbrook Country Club in Elkin, N.C. and president of Zim's Golf Shop, Inc. He has been the host PGA professional and tournament coordinator of five NAIA Collegiate golf tournaments and has been elected to Class A membership to the Professional Golfers' Association of America. He has been active in the Gardner-Webb Bulldog Club and is President of the Surry County Gardner-Webb Alumni Association.

McClure

Dina Smith McClure represents the women's basketball program in the inaugural class. Dina is the all-time leading scorer in the College's women's basketball program with 2,031 points and ranks as the second all-time leading rebounder with 874 rebounds. Mrs. McClure holds single game records for points scored (46 vs. Mars Hill), field goals attempted (39 vs. Mars Hill), free throws attempted (19 vs. Barber-Scotia) and free throw percentage (100 % vs. Wofford). She holds single season records for free throws attempted (183, 1984-85) and free throws made (146, 1984-85). In addition to her career point record, she holds career records for most games (94), field goals attempted (1,742), free throws attempted (594) and free throw percentage (76.9).

Since leaving Gardner-Webb, Mrs. McClure has been coaching high school basketball. She began her career at Polk Central High School and is presently the Head Women's Basketball Coach at East Rutherford High School.

Robinson

Gary Robinson is Gardner-Webb's only first team All-American baseball player. He received this honor in 1975.

In 1974, Robinson was named first team All-State by the Greensboro News and Record, first team All-District 26, first team All-Region and team Most Valuable Player. He served as team captain during the 1974 season. In 1975, Robinson was named All-District 26 and All-State once again in addition to his All-American honors. His .466 batting average in 1974 still stands as a Gardner-Webb single season record.

Robinson is currently the head baseball coach at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte, where he has compiled a 280-244-3 record during the last 10 years. He has coached five teams to 30 or more wins and was the 1984 Sun Belt Conference Coach-of-the-Year. Robinson is also noted as having coached four players who have played in the major leagues, three of them still active, and has coached eight players that are still active in the minor league system. Altogether, 34 of Robinson's players have signed professional contracts in his 10 years at UNC-C.

Wall

Zeno Wall was a standout on Gardner-Webb athletic teams of the early 1930s. He lettered in football, basketball and baseball during his days at the College. He started at quarterback on the 1930 football team that won the North Carolina Junior College Football Championship and was selected as quarterback on the North Carolina Junior College All-Star Team.

Wall was also an outstanding defender, intercepting nine passes. He averaged 43 yards per punt on 51 punts in 1930 and also kicked one field goal. He scored eight touchdowns and was selected Outstanding Player in the North Carolina Junior College Conference.

After leaving Gardner-Webb, Wall went on to Wake Forest University, where he was a standout on the 1930s teams.

He remains an active athlete today on the golf course. He has recorded 19 holes-in-one as golfer. Wall is employed with the Chamber of Commerce in Gatlinburg, Tenn., where one publication has referred to him as, "the world's biggest promoter of the City of Gatlinburg."

Poston

Behind every successful athletic program there is an administration that is committed to supplying the resources and other support necessary for excellence. At Gardner-Webb College, no other man typifies this statement more than Dr. Eugene Poston. Poston led Gardner-Webb College through a time of unparalleled growth as the College moved from junior to senior status, expanded its physical plant, expanded its academic programs and established an outstanding athletic tradition.

Poston served Gardner-Webb as President from 1961 to 1976. Upon his arrival in 1961 he immediately established the "Decade of Advance" program. The goals of this program included increasing student-body size, a larger faculty, a higher endowment, accreditation as a senior college and several building projects, one of which was a new football stadium.

Gardner-Webb's first class of inductees are fine individuals who represent many periods of Gardner-Webb's athletic history and a wide variety of sports. Certainly, there are many others who will someday deservedly be placed in the Hall of Fame. In fact, this induction may serve as a catalyst for many more nominations and inductions for years to come. Just as certain is the fact that Gardner-Webb will continue to produce coaches and athletes worthy of such notoriety.

Three others were selected but not able to attend. Their names will be released at a latter date. ■
